THE UK FILM COUNCIL – WHO WE ARE AND WHAT WE DO

The UK Film Council is a government agency for film production in the UK.

It guarantees the economic, cultural and educational aspects of film in the UK and in different countries. Here is what we do:

- We support the distribution of British films in the UK and around the world;
- We stimulate creativity, film culture and education through our Regional Investment Fund for England;
- We give technical assistance during the production of films;

- We give access to films and cinemas for people with visual and auditory disabilities;
 - We invest millions in cinemas and in UK film festivals with money from the National Lottery;
 - We have First Light and Mediabox, agencies for young people of 5-18 years old. These institutions teach about filmmaking and stimulate the production of creative films or documentaries;
 - We also have Filmclub, an after-school club. This club gives children free access to the best of world cinema;
 - We conduct research projects, for example, the first research about the cultural impact of British films;
- In short, we make the cinema an excellent experience for millions of people.
